Reference: de Vaus, D. (1996). "Children's Responsibilities to Elderly Parents." Family Matters(45): 16-21.

Key Words:

HACC, informal care, family support, filial responsibility

Research aim:

The article focuses on the involvement of children in the responsibility for the care of elderly family members in Australia.

Results/Conclusion:

Within Australia, the poorer economic situation of some migrant groups will require greater support from families and this can promote a belief in the responsibility of families to care for elderly family members.

Implications:

The aged care policy direction that encourages home and community based care relies on the availability and willingness of families to accept a certain level of responsibility for the care of elderly family members.
