

The Polish impact on Australian society

Author/s: Jupp, James | Year: 2004 | Publication type: Book section | Peer reviewed: | Topic area/s: General Wellbeing, Culturally Appropriate Care

Reference:

Key Words:

polish, ageing, aged care

Research aim:

An overview of the impact of the Polish community in Australia traces the community's history from the first major wave of Polish refugees in the post-war period to the profile of the community in the new millennium. Like many ethnic communities, the Poles face a number of challenges in the near future. First and foremost is the ageing of the immigrant population.

Results/Conclusion:

Implications:

Caring for the increasing proportion of elderly Polish-born requires the provision of ethnic-specific services and accommodation.

Cultural Group(s):

Polish

Location of study:

Age group:

Number included in study:

N/A

Type of participants:

Research approach:

Type of data:

Secondary data sources used:

Specific scales or analytical techniques used:

Implications/ Recommendations:

Notes:

Not primary research - discussion piece